

THE COURAGE TO SPEAK® FOUNDATION SUNNY'S STORY

Sunny's Story

If only.

If only our pet could talk – could warn us we'd lose our son to drugs.

This is Sunny's Story. Although it's aimed at children, it's for everyone who loves someone who might become addicted.

Sunny's Story is narrated through the eyes, ears and mind of Sunny, the family beagle, and tells of the ups and downs of his life with his young master, from the moment they met at an animal shelter to Sunny's anguished yelps watching his best friend succumb to drugs.

Written by Ginger Katz, a mother who lost her son Ian to a drug overdose, Sunny's Story helps families talk openly about the dangers of drugs.

The Story

"My name is Sunny. I'm a white, brown and black Beagle with short legs and long ears that blow in the wind when I run. I live with Ginger and Larry in a house by the ocean. We are all very sad because once we had the best boy in the world. His name was Ian, and this is the story of how he was taken from us.

When I was a puppy I had to go to the animal shelter to find a family..."

Ms. Katz tells her son Ian's story through the family's soulful beagle who was Ian's special friend. Sunny is a perceptive non-human narrator with very human feelings and a gentle buffer that allows young readers the necessary distance needed to deal with this difficult subject. Sunny is a silent observer of the tragedy which led to the founding of the Courage to Speak® Foundation.

Sunny's Story is meant to be read at the dinner table, in schools, libraries, as part of the Courage to Speak® Drug Prevention Curriculum in every grade and as a stand-alone book to be discussed for elementary, middle and high school students.

Comments:

"They loved reading about Ian's life, finding the signs where his life began to go astray, and culminating in how he could have avoided his outcome." Ellen Seltzer (Connecticut) 6th grade teacher

"This book is an important and unique addition to the list of preventive tools so necessary for children in today's world." Dr. Deborah Prothrow-Stith, Professor of Practice and Associate Dean, Harvard School of Public Health

"Sunny's Story is a perfect way to introduce the sensitive topic of substance abuse to children in elementary, middle and high school. It engages the students at the onset and keeps their attention throughout." Dominick Splendorio, Health Educator
